Never has old age received more respect than with the Cones. Even the cats at Bellevue revere them. Nurses stop in their tours to speak kindly to Mrs. Cone and her husband. She asks them to pray for her.

After the couple had been registered at the hospital they were asked who was their nearest friend.

"Mark." Mrs. Cone and replied.

"Mark." Mrs. Cone said.

"Mark." Mrs. Cone said.

"Mark." the husband replied.

"We have always been happy." the little wife said in reply to a question today, "Mark and I came to this country from Ireland sixty years ago. My husband was an iron worker, and we went to be them. Pa. We had two fine booys. William went to the war and never came back. Pat went out West and the last letter we had from him was twenty years ago."

Then Mrs. Cone wept softly. She passed her hand through the air in search of her husband. "Mark, dear, are you here?"

"Yes, wife, I am here." the husband said, and the mutual affection, greater now after sixty years than when both were in youth, touched every one to the heart who witnessed it.
